Military History Museum

5 Spandau's landmark, the Citadel, dates back to the 16th century – the Julius Tower from as early as the 13th century. The Citadel grounds are home to various museums and exhibition spaces (including the City History Museum, the Archaeological Window and Centre for Contemporary Art). In summer, the fortress building is a venue for concerts, in winter it is home to over 10,000 bats.

6 Narrow alleys and half-timbered houses characterise Behnitz/Kolk. A part of the old town wall from the 14th century has been preserved on the High Steinweg. The St. Marien-kirche am Behnitz is the second oldest Catholic church in Berlin. Here, concerts and readings are held as well as masses.

7 The Reformation spread from the Church of St. Nikolai to Berlin and Brandenburg. Under National Socialism, St. Nikolai was a centre of the Confessional Church, which opposed the regime. Opposite the church is the Spandovia Sacra community museum.

8 The Gothic House was built from red brick in the 15th century. At that time it was one of only a few stone houses in the region, today it is the oldest town house in the city. For visitors, it is the first point of contact: On the ground floor, you will find all the information you need for your visit to Spandau in the Tourist information office. On the upper floor, there is a branch of the City History Museum.

10 The Spandau district of Siemensstadt is full of industrial heritage. Over time, the Siemens company built numerous industrial and factory buildings as well as residential areas for workers. One example is the large housing estate Siemensstadt, which is a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The new urban quarter Siemensstadt2 is currently under construction.

11 The Wild West begins in Spandau just behind the Paulsternstraße underground station. Over more than 10,000 square metres you will find the western-style Old Texas Town with saloon, bank, printing house, church and prison.

13 The Alt-Staaken village church was located only a few metres away from the inner-German border. While residents from West Berlin were forbidden to visit, it served as a parish hall for citizens from West-Staaken (then GDR territory). Inside you can admire the painting "Reconciled Unity" by Gabriele Mucchi.

Hahneberg

14 The Hahneberg is a local recreation area. The nature reserve station at the foot of the hill provides information on the flora and fauna. Hidden away is Fort Hahneberg – one of the last new fortresses in Germany and an important hibernation site for bats. At the top of the Hahneberg is the Bruno H. Bürgel Observatory. Art lovers can visit the gallery of the Spandau Artists' Working Group.

OFF TO SPANDAU

With its historic old town, fortress buildings, fascinating industrial heritage and green oases, Spandau is an Eldorado for explorers. At the confluence of the Spree and Havel rivers - only a few kilometres from Potsdam.

FROM THE OLD TOWN TO THE CITADEL

The old town with its lively pedestrian zone awaits you in the heart of the district. Marvel at Spandau's many sights as you walk down the historic alleys and round off the day in one of the neighbourhood pubs. For art and culture lovers, Spandau's museums and galleries offer many things to see and do.

Once a fortress and garrison town and protector of Berlin, Spandau developed into an important industrial location. Today, the Spandau Citadel is considered the best-preserved Renaissance fortress in Europe. Art lovers can enjoy its galleries and museums, music fans flock to the Citadel for festivals and concerts, and nature lovers take part in bat tours. There is an audio guide for the Old Town and the Citadel, which you can download in the free Lauschtour app.

TURBULENT TIMES – BETWEEN EAST AND WEST

During the Cold War, the Wall and border fortifications separated the people of Spandau and their neighbours in Havelland, Falkensee and Potsdam. Today, there are many places along the former border whose stories are entwined with past division. The western route of the Berlin Wall Trail runs for over 20 kilometres through the district.

Even Albert Einstein enjoyed the Havel flair in the "Spandauer Schloss" (Spandau castle), his summerhouse on the Scharfe Lanke lake.

SO GREEN – AND BUILT CLOSE TO WATER

Hike across expansive meadows and fields, stroll along the banks of the Havel river, or discover Spandau by boat. Those looking for rural wonders and water will find it in the green south. Here you can buy fresh regional products directly from the farmer or in the village shop. In the north lies the green heart of the district. The Spandauer Forst, one of the largest wooded areas in Berlin, is known for its diverse flora and fauna. Just around the corner are several bathing spots where you can enjoy a refreshing dip in the Havel.

Tiefwerder Meadows

CYCLING IN SPANDAU

A wonderful way to explore Spandau and its many highlights is to take a tour by bicycle. With the Berlin Wall Trail, the Berlin-Copenhagen Cycle Path and the Havel and Havelland Cycle Path, four central routes run through the district. Those who want to take a thematic voyage of discovery can get to know the industrial past on "Production + Munition" or the more natural sides of the district on the way to the "Green South".

Information about our tours can be found at www.visitspandau.de and on our Komoot profile, "Spandau".

PILGRIMAGE TO SPANDAU

The Spandau Protestant church community opened the Spandau Pilgrimage Trail in 2020. It connects 24 Protestant and two Catholic churches in the district over a 75 km distance and is divided into three circular routes: city, countryside and river. There is also a circular bicycle route. With the pilgrim's passport, the pilgrim's guide and the pilgrim's map, you will be well equipped. Further information at www.spandau-evangelisch.de/pilgern.
